A WAR cloud has appeared in Europe over the terms of peace between Turkey and Greece. The sultan refuses to have the powers adjust the differences between the two countries, and with three to seven hundred thousand soldiers in Thessaly, he is so situated that he can put up a strong kind of a bluff. It looks as if the mighty powers will have to enforce their will or acknowledge by their silence that the sick man is the boss.

SENATOR TURPIE and ex-Governor Matthews have not yet entered into any agreement with reference to the senatorship. One of Mr. Turpie's friends says that the senator has accepted an invitation to spend three weeks at the ex-governor's farm immediately after the adjournment of congress, and it is the understanding that the political aspirations of the two men will be thoroughly discussed during the stay of the senator.

SENATOR FAIRBANKS, as a native Ohioan, is well acquainted with Horace L. Chapman, the democratic nominee for governor of Ohio. The two men, though of opposing politics, are warm personal friends. When the fact became known that Chapman was nominated at Columbus, Senator Fairbanks immediately sent his Ohio friend a telegram congratulating him upon the honor conferred upon him, but expressing the opinion that he (Fairbanks) would have occasion in November to send another congratulatory telegram to Gov. BARNEY BARNATO, the rich diamond speculator and millionaire, it is now stated, was simply worried to death. He attempted to personally look after the details of his enormous holdings, and in this way simply broke himself down. There seems to be no doubt that persistent overwork weakened him, mentally as well as physically, and that his mind was unbalanced at the time he plunged into the ocean to end his existence. His case afford a vivid illustration of the fact that too much wealth may be as destructive to human happiness as too much poverty.

GREAT CROWD.

Thirty Thousand People at Robison Park Monday.

The Multitude Was Handled With Ease Under the Perfect System of the Street Railway Company.

Monday was a proud day for the management of the Consolidated Street Railway, for not in the history of street railway traffic in Fort Wayne were so many people carried in one day. And it was done without a jar. The cars going out were crowded all through the day but the people were landed at the park safely. The critical period was when the rush was made for cars home. The twenty-five cars running on the line were taxed to their utmost capacity between the hours of 9 o'clock in the evening and 2 o'clock in the morning. The park was then emptied of its mass of humanity and only a few stragglers remained until the last car at 3 a. m. It was a banner day for Robison park and it is a compliment to Manager Robison, Superintendent Stanton and Foreman Tony Lintz that everything went off like clockwork without an accident. Chief Clerk Gerke had not completed his count and was not able to give the accurate figures of the crowd, but a conservative estimate places it at 30,000.

Mr. Calver, although born in England only twenty-eight years ago, has the appearance at a distance of an old man, except that he is nervously active. He has the pink eye, white hair, eyebrows and mustache of the true Albino and, dressed in a costume different from that of other men, attracts attention wherever he goes. On the sleeves and back of his coat are the words, "Dr. Hobbs' Sparagus Kidney Pills," which indicates his mission in Fort Wayne. He is an expert window trimmer and has arranged to be in the show window of Gross & Pelleus Thursday evening, when he will perform some wonderful feats in tearing paper into fanciful designs.

The Tabernacle meetings are now in progress on South Calhoun street, near Hamilton street. Services every afternoon and evening, at 2:30 and 7:30. The object of these meetings is not to introduce a new denomination, nor to entice anybody to leave his church, but to lead souls to Jesus and believers into closer fellowship with the Lord—the Savior of the world, the Sanctifier of the believer, the Physician of the church and our coming Lord. THE SILENCE AND THE SONG.

Sing to me, girl of my heart,
Sing! The slain silence rejoices,
Pierced by that rarest of voices.
Artless, yet higher thou art,
And my soul by the song
Is wafted along
In the listening bliss that its choice is
Never and never to part.

Sing to me, girl of my love!
Sing! And the angels in heaven—
To whom the rare rapture is given
To linger and listen above—
Folding their wings
While the melody rings
Till the soul of the silence is shriven,
Hover above thee, my love!

Sing to me, fairest of girls!
Sing! The dead silence was golden,
But dearer the song shall be holden
Than riches of rubies and pearls.
And the silence new born
Of the songless morn
Shall sigh to be slain like the old one
Sing to me, fairest of girls!
—J. L. Heaton in "The Quilting Bee"

A MATCHMAKER

Major Mackintosh was a very good fellow, but he had one little weakness. He was a most inveterate matchmaker.

No doubt there was some excuse for him. Life seemed rather empty and purposeless now that he had left the army, and as he was still a vigorous, energetic man he needed some wholesome vent for his activity. Matchmaking provided him at once with an interest and an occupation. It gave him plenty to think of by night and to do by day. Without it he would have been the most miserable of men. With it he was the cheeriest and the most self important. It is a very good thing sometimes to have a little weakness.

Of course, the major prided himself on his tact and delicacy and fondly fancied nobody ever saw through his transparent little artifices. So sure of this was he indeed that he not infrequently explained them at some length to the persons principally concerned, so that they might know just when and how to act under any given circumstances—a very wise precaution and one that saved an immense amount of trouble and misunderstanding.

But though he took every care to guard against failure matters would occasionally go wrong and the most prudently planned match come to nothing, greatly to the major's dismay. But he was a reasonable man on the whole, and when he knew he was beaten he accepted defeat philosophically. Yes, when he knew he was beaten—but as a bold Briton and a soldier he was very hard to convince on this point and sometimes struggled on manfully long after defeat was a foregone conclusion.

Despite his weakness—or possibly even in consequence of it—the major was popular, and men and women alike found much to admire in him. His manner might be a little brusque, but his means were ample, and this was a great point in his favor, especially where the unmarried ladies of his acquaintance were concerned, for they were not blind to the fact that he (the matchmaker) would be a most excellent match, and to many of them it seemed a pity that he should spend so much time and trouble in providing for his friends' happiness while his own remained unsecured. More than one kind hearted woman, though taking small interest in his efforts to settle other people, would gladly have helped him to arrange a match for himself, but it was all to no purpose. Whether he saw nothing or too much no one knew, but the result was the same. The matchmaking major remained unmarried and on excellent terms with all the ladies who would willingly have married him, a fact which alone spoke volumes for his good feeling and capital management—if indeed it were not purely a matter of luck.

The major had but one near relative in the world—his nephew, Jack Mackintosh. Jack was in a government office, and as he was not 23 years of age his uncle began to think seriously of arranging a match for him. He had long had his eye on at least half a dozen sufficiently pretty girls, any one of whom might be just the right thing for the young fellow—if only none of the other five should prove to be better. The major was very anxious that Jack's match should really be a triumph, and it cost him much thought and grave weighing of pros and cons for months before the critical time came. Of course he did not consult Jack in the matter. To do so at so early a stage in the proceedings would have been contrary to all precedent. No, he must muddle it out for himself and only have the boy down to make the lady's acquaintance when he had finally made up his mind as to which of the half dozen it was to be.

And, after all, it proved to be none of them.

No; despite the earnest cogitations of months and all the careful study of six specimens of girlhood the major suddenly made up his mind that Nellie Bloxham was the one woman in the world for Jack, and this within five minutes of his first introduction to her. The girl charmed him, and he at once decided that she must marry Jack. A letter was dispatched that very evening, and a few days later the young fellow joined his uncle at the watering place where he had been so fortunate as to make Miss Bloxham's acquaintance.

"Well, Jack, have you got your leave, or is this only a Saturday to Monday trip?" was the first question he asked when they met at the station.

"I can stay a fortnight if you'll have me."

"That's capital. I've a lot of friends here and some uncommonly pretty girls among them. The Fishers came down last week, and the Renshaws"—

"Is May Renshaw here? I'm glad of that."

May Renshaw was one of the half dozen who had been under consideration, and it is possible that Jack was aware of the fact, but of their recent rejection he was totally ignorant.

"May? Yes, I—I believe so."

The major spoke absently, for he was thinking how very unfortunate it would be if Jack really felt any attraction in that quarter. Not but what May was a nice girl enough—till you compared her with Nellie Bloxham. Let Jack once see Nellie and he would think no more of May.

Jack noticed the change of tone and drew his own conclusions from it.

"Any new acquaintances, uncle?" he asked. And there was a twinkle in his eye as he spoke which it was just as well the major did not see.

"A few. Yes, Jack, a few. Old Colonel Marsh and his sisters; pleasant women, though a bit elderly—for you, you know, and Mrs. Bloxham and her daughter; charming girl, the daughter, though a bit young—for me, of course."

"Ah, about the right age for me to play with, I suppose?"

There was some impatience in the young man's tone.

"To play with? No, no, Jack, you're too old for play now. It's quite time you settled, and I've been thinking"—

"Yes?" as he paused impressively, for the major felt that at last the time had come for him to speak.

"That Miss Bloxham is the very girl for you. In fact, that you're just cut out for each other."

"H'm!" said Jack.

It wasn't much of a remark perhaps, but the major found it distinctly disconcerting.

"Well, why not?" he asked testily.

"Why not? No reason perhaps. But then again—why?"

"Because she's pretty and good form and very good company, a thorough lady and a charming woman. Can't you trust my judgment in a matter of this kind?"

The major spoke with the assurance of one whom long experience entitled to speak with authority, and Jack smiled. Unfortunately his uncle saw the smile, and it irritated him.

"She's miles and away too good for you, you young dog, if that's what you mean," he broke out angrily.

"That's exactly what I do mean. If she's all the admirable things you say she is, I fail to see how we can be cut out for each other and shall feel bound in common fairness to let some better fellow cut me out. I'm not half good enough for her—if she's all you say she is."

The major burst out laughing.

"If that's all, come and have a look at her," he said, "and then you can judge for yourself. She is sure to be on the parade. They all are at this hour."

"Oh, yes, I'll have a look at her!" said Jack.

Jack was as good as his word.

He "had a look" at Miss Bloxham, and he was introduced to her. They talked together, the major beaming approval the while. He was introduced to her mother—a harmless, garrulous old lady, who talked whether there was anybody to listen or not and always about nothing in particular. Her talk was never allowed to interfere with general conversation, nor did she expect it to do so, which was but reasonable under the circumstances.

When the Bloxhams left the parade an hour or so later, the major and Jack walked with them as far as their own door, and Jack walked with Miss Bloxham.

"Well?" said the major as they turned away.

"Eh?" Jack was evidently not attending. A slight, pale faced little girl was passing at the moment and bowed to him with a shy smile.

"Who's that?" Major Mackintosh asked abruptly. It struck him that Jack was looking ridiculously pleased about something or other.

"The sister of a man in my office. I've been down to his place once or twice lately."

"Oh!" The major dismissed the subject. "Well, what do you think of her?"

"Of—her?"

"Yes. Isn't she all I said and more?"

"Oh, Miss Bloxham! Yes, she seems all right."

"All right? I should think she is all right. 'Pon my word, Jack, you take it coolly."

"Why, what would you have? She has talked to me about a lot of things for an hour or so, but I really know nothing about her, except that she is good looking and too good form to say that she is bored whatever she may feel."

"Bored! Why should she be bored? Didn't you talk to her?"

"Yes, and she'd much rather I hadn't. I wasn't the right man, uncle, that's all."

"Then, by Jove, I should like to know who is," the major said testily.

Jack laughed, but he did not pursue the subject further. After all, it was no affair of his, and if his uncle liked to play a little game of cross purposes he had no wish to interfere with him.

The next week passed away pleasantly enough. The major, taught by experience, knew just the kind of little expedition that was best qualified to throw young people together—possibly not always the right young people, but he was scarcely to blame for that—and he was constantly arranging some nice little pleasure party or another. Of course, none of these was complete without the Bloxhams and a quiet, shy girl, a great friend of Nellie's, in whom—somewhat to his surprise—the major recognized Jack's little acquaintance.

Millie Lee went everywhere with her friend, and as she was always sweet tempered and happy the major presently grew quite fond of her in a fatherly sort of way and looked forward to arranging a suitable marriage for her as soon as Jack should be off his mind. In the meantime he told her all about his plans for Jack and talked so freely himself on his pet project that he never noticed how she dropped into silence as soon as he alluded to it, especially as her silence evidently did not arise from any lack of interest. She was staying at a boarding house, and but for Nellie's kindness would have had a dull time of it.

The major observed with approval that Jack, too, was kind to her, for he thought it an excellent sign that he should wish to please Miss Bloxham by little attentions to her friend. On the whole, he was satisfied with the way things were going—or so he told himself—and he could not understand why he found a hitherto unknown difficulty in sounding Miss Bloxham on the subject and gently preparing the way for Jack's suit.

Of course Jack was in love with her. How could he fail to be, knowing her so well as he now did? Why, even he, the major, was more than half in love with her himself, as he owned, with a sigh to his cigar, and he was old enough to know the folly of it. How, then, should a young fellow like Jack escape? Now give them time. Nothing but time was needed now—and a very little more of his judicious management—to bring the matter to a successful conclusion and transform Miss Nellie Bloxham into Mrs. Mackintosh—Mrs. Jack Mackintosh. Ah, what a difference that one little word made!

The major called himself an old fool for his pains and refused to think of what perhaps might have happened had he only been a dozen or 15 years younger, but for him, a man of 50— Oh, no; it was out of the question.

And so the first week of Jack's visit came to an end.

The little expedition, however, did not come to an end. On the contrary, Major Mackintosh redoubled his exertions, for he was growing extraordinarily anxious to have the affair settled, and the more he saw of Nellie the more he was convinced that Jack would be the luckiest fellow in the world if he won her. And he must win her. The major felt that his reputation was at stake, for he had never labored to make any match as he had labored for this. Oh, he must speak seriously to Jack about it. As to Miss Bloxham, she must surely suspect something of his hopes, and she had not discouraged them. She always agreed readily to all his plans and treated him with marked consideration, and, of course, it must be on Jack's account. To imagine anything else would be— Oh, no; he wasn't quite such a fool as that.

"Jack, have you thought over what I said to you?" he asked abruptly one day as they were walking back to their hotel.

"What about? You've said a good deal at different times."

"Oh, about settling, you know."

"To be sure I have. There's a lot in it." This was distinctly encouraging, yet the major felt his heart sink unaccountably. "In fact, I think I shall act on it."

"You're thinking seriously of settling, my boy?"

"Most seriously. To tell the truth," and there was a twinkle in Jack's eye as he spoke, "I was just going to tell you that I've already asked—some one to settle me, and she's promised to do it."

There was a moment's silence. Then the major pulled himself together and wrung Jack's hand.

"I congratulate you with all my heart, my boy," he said huskily.

"Thank you. She's a dear little girl and thinks no end of you. She has no father, you see, and so"—

"Yes, yes, I quite understand." The major felt that this was a little too much. "I think she must know how I've set my heart on it," he added.

"Not a bit of it. She feared you had quite other views for me. Indeed, it was all Miss Bloxham and I could do to persuade her"—

"Her? Whom?"

"Why, Millie, of course. She fears you'll play the cruel uncle and object to my marrying her."

"Millie. Marrying Millie!"

"Yes. Surely you must have seen"—

"And what does Miss Bloxham say to this?"

"Oh, she's delighted. We are all such friends, you know."

"Friends! Marry Millie! And but for that little marplot you might have married Miss Bloxham"—

"Not a bit of it. You are mistaken there. Even had I ever wished it she wouldn't have had me."

"Who told you so?"

"Nobody, but I'm not quite a fool any more than you are quite 100, because— Uncle, Millie is not the marplot, but—quite another person," significantly.

"By Jove!" exclaimed the major.

He was silent for some moments. When next he spoke, it was in a very different tone:

"Do you think I've any chance, Jack?"

Jack laughed, not unkindly.

"Go and see," he said.

And the major went.

So, after all, he made an excellent match for Miss Bloxham, and Mrs. Mackintosh never regretted that Jack was not the bridegroom.—Household Words.

A Curiosity of Literature.

John Heywood, the playwright and epigrammatist, was patronized by Henry VIII and Elizabeth. "What the 'Faerie Queene,'" says Warton, "could not procure for Spenser from the penurious Elizabeth and her precise ministers Heywood gained by puns and conceits." The object of one of his books, as disclosed by the title page, is singular, "A Dialogue, containing in effect the Number of all the Proverbs in the English Tongue, compact in a Matter concerning Two Marriages."

When the Marquis of Winchester, lord high treasurer, was presented with a copy of this book by the author, he inquired what it contained, and being answered, "All the proverbs in English," replied: "What! All? No, no. 'Bate me an ace, quoth Bolton,'" a form of speech once much in vogue. "By my faith," said Heywood, "that is not in."

It happened that the marquis casually uttered the only proverb not in the book.

Camden mentions an interview of Heywood with Queen Mary at which her majesty inquired what wind blew him to court. He answered, "Two specially, the one to see your majesty."

"We thank you for that," said the queen, "but I pray you what is the other?"

"That your grace," said he, "might see me."

The curious work on proverbs is in rhyme and contains many sayings that are now forgotten as well as allusions to superstitions still remaining.—Harper's Round Table.

New York and St. Petersburg.

The island of the Manhattoes sent beaver skins to Europe soon after Queen Elizabeth died. In 1626, only one year after the death of King James I, a permanent town was established upon it. And the first great chapter in the story of this town was closed in 1664, only four years after Charles II picked up his father's battered crown. Then New Amsterdam passed from Dutch into English hands and was rechristened for the Duke of York, 21 years before he began to govern it as James II. Thus the silver tankard owned by the Schuyler family and given to their ancestor by Queen Anne when he took five Mohawk chiefs to visit her in 1710 is by no means a relic of early New York. Who thinks of St. Petersburg as a typically modern town? Yet in 1710 St. Petersburg had been founded only half a dozen years.—Mrs. Schuyler Van Rensselaer in Century.

Anecdotes of Artists.

The memorial exhibitions bring out some interesting anecdotes of the painters represented at them. Here is one concerning Leighton. In painting "Summer Slumber," where every accessory depicts somnolence, he was much troubled with the pigeons which rest on the balustrade behind the figure. They were in the most wide-awake mood, until, upon some one's suggestion, he gave them some grain steeped in whisky, whereupon they satisfied his requirements as long and as often as he wished.

Here is another concerning Alfred Hunt. He was at the same time both a very slow and a fastidiously punctilious sketcher from nature—a combination which is said to have hastened his end for he had a block for every hour of the day and every condition of weather, and, overladden with these, he would often trudge a lengthy distance to his work. He would then start, say, on an incomplete morning effect in sunshine, to be cast aside for a similar subject in shadow if the scene clouded over, or for a noonday one directly that hour was reached. It is said that he consequently sometimes carried as many as a dozen varieties of the same view.

IS IT A TRIFLE?

That Common Trouble, Acid Dyspepsia or Sour Stomach.

Now Recognized as a Cause of Serious Disease.

Acid dyspepsia, commonly called heartburn or sour stomach, is a form of indigestion resulting from fermentation of the food. The stomach being too weak to promptly digest it, the food remains until fermentation begins, filling the stomach with gas, and a bitter, sour, burning taste in the mouth is often present. This condition soon becomes chronic and being an every day occurrence is given but little attention. Because dyspepsia is not immediately fatal many people do nothing for the trouble.

Within a recent period a remedy has been discovered prepared solely to cure dyspepsia and stomach troubles. It is known as Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets and is now becoming rapidly used and prescribed as a radical cure for every form of dyspepsia.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets have been placed before the public and are sold by druggists everywhere at 50 cents per package. It is prepared by the Stuart Chemical Co., Marshall, Mich., and while it promptly and effectually restores a vigorous digestion, at the same time is perfectly harmless and will not injure the most delicate stomach, but on the contrary by giving perfect digestion strengthens the stomach, improves the appetite and makes life worth living.

SHOP AND RAIL.

A Pennsylvania Freight Meets With an Accident.

An Employee of the Bass Works Has a Hand Injured—A Moulder To be Married Tonight—Office and Depot.

Seven Pennsylvania cars, all empty, were derailed at Colehour last night causing a wreck which delayed the train about two hours, but did not block the tracks so as to interfere with traffic to any great extent. Brakeman W. E. Burt, who resides on Baker street, was on one of the wrecked cars and was thrown to the ground. He escaped with a sprained ankle, which injury was attended to by Dr. Stemen this morning when the unfortunate man reached the city. The cars were derailed by a breakbeam dropping upon the tracks.

PAINFUL ACCIDENT.

Henry Enghausen, an employe of the Bass foundry, had his left hand badly injured yesterday afternoon. In an apparent absent minded manner, he laid his hand upon the cog wheels of a big roller which was in motion and the member was drawn into the cogs, breaking two or three bones and lacerating the flesh of the palm and fingers. The second finger was so badly crushed that Dr. J. W. McCausland, the attending surgeon, had to amputate it at the knuckle joint. The report that both of Mr. Enghausen's hands had been injured and that he would have to suffer amputation of one of them is erroneous.

WILL MARRY QUIETLY.

A wedding which will cause no little surprise will be that of Adam G. Zeigler and Miss Emma Pons, which will be solemnized at the residence of the groom's mother, on Maple avenue, this evening, Rev. Philip Wambsganss, of Emanuel's German church, officiating. Mr. Zeigler is a moulder employed by the Bass works.

CHANGE OF ROUTE OF FARM PRODUCTS.

Two or three years ago all the grain exported from the United States, passed through New York, Philadelphia, Boston or Baltimore. Since then new ports have been opened and one of them, New Orleans, is second on the list in the volume of grain exported. This change of route to the seaboard is responsible for no little portion of the loss sustained by the trunk lines by a falling off the past two years in their eastbound freights. In commenting on the efforts of the New York mercantile bodies to recover the business of former years, the Baltimore Sun says: "The recent efforts of New York merchants to augment their volume of business by manipulating rates of transportation are in effect a confession of the fact that their city's pre-eminence in the export and import trade and in the jobbing and distributing trade is declining. Formerly, under the operation of natural forces, New York controlled almost the whole commercial movement on the Atlantic seaboard. Business came to her without effort on her part, and such crumbs of commerce as fell to Baltimore and other southern ports were conceded with kindly indifference. But now this is all changed. Changing conditions have shifted the tide of business to other cities Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Norfolk on the Atlantic, and New Orleans and Galveston on the gulf now divide with New York the volume of traffic she formerly monopolized. She still has the lion's share but wants it all. The effort to deprive Baltimore of its corn-export trade by getting the railroads to abolish the long-standing 'differential' is one expression of New York's greedy state of mind. The new expedient of utilizing the Trunk line and Joint Traffic associations to prevent southern and western merchants from stopping in Baltimore is another."

A BACK YARD OBSERVATORY.

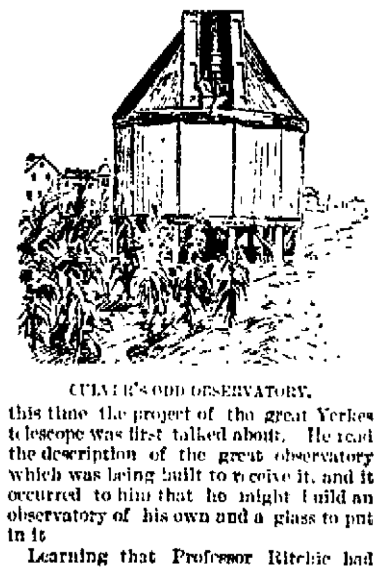
A Big Homemade Telescope Owned by an Amateur Astronomer.

In the back yard of a modest little house on the outskirts of Chicago is set up the seventh largest telescope in the United States. Not even the learned astronomers of the University of Chicago, who have the use of the largest telescope in the country and who might be supposed to take an interest in the struggles of other star gazers, knew of the existence of this telescope until the other day.

The big glass was built and is owned by L. F. Culver, who is only an amateur astronomer, but is a very enthusiastic one. He is about 40 years of age and is entirely unknown in the scientific world. In fact, until a few years ago he was a drummer by profession. Mr. Culver was born and reared on a farm near Lansing, Mich. He attended the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor, and it was there that he became fascinated with the study of the stars. The year before he graduated he made his first telescope. It was a small, crude affair, with only an inch and a half aperture, but it served his purpose for the time being.

When Culver left college and took a position as traveling salesman for a manufacturing concern, he carried his glass along with him, together with a folding stand, and whenever possible set it up and watched the stars. Of course a drummer with astronomical proclivities was such an unusual combination that he was made the subject of a great deal of ridicule and had to stand many sneers, but he persisted and kept on with his study. After the first year he was able to buy a little larger glass.

Mr. Culver finally married and gave up the drumming business. He settled in Chicago and purchased a home. About this time the project of the great Yerkes telescope was first talked about. He read the description of the great observatory which was being built to receive it, and it occurred to him that he might build an observatory of his own and a glass to put in it.



CULVER'S ODD OBSERVATORY.

Learning that Professor Ritchie had built an 8 inch reflecting telescope, he wrote to him, asking an interview. Professor Ritchie gave Culver many valuable suggestions and so much encouragement that the latter determined to attempt the construction of a 12½ inch telescope, which would have a range of from 60 to 1,250 diameters. The nicety of adjustment and mechanical exactness demanded made the task a most difficult one for the inexperienced telescope maker, but he finally accomplished it. For want of a better location he mounted the glass in the garden behind his house and had it inclosed in a 12 sided observatory having a revolving turret, which is the wonder of the neighborhood.

A KOREAN PRINCE.

Comes to America to Add Occidental Polish to His Oriental Education.

From faraway Korea comes Crown Prince Eui-Wha of Korea to finish his education in the United States and add an occidental polish to his worldly wisdom. The prince expects that some day he will be called upon to rule over Korea, and he wants to be prepared with a broader view of life and a more liberal understanding of men and affairs than he would have if he remained at home. Besides, it is safer for him abroad, for Korea is in a turbulent state politically, and the prince has already escaped from several conspiracies against his life.

Eui-Wha has thus far had the best educational advantages to be found anywhere in the orient. For a year he has been an attendant at the celebrated Japanese school of Fuko-Zama, an institution much affected by young Koreans. But now he has come across the ocean to see what the new world can do for him. He is accompanied by two young Korean noblemen, Yong Kin and Sin Sang Koo. Yong Kin ought to know the ropes in America pretty well, for he was for three years charge d'affaires of the Korean legation at Washington.

PRINCE EUI-WHA.

The three Koreans arrived at San Francisco recently, and it is expected that they will soon make arrangements to settle either at Cambridge or New Haven, where they will remain while the prince is filling his head with a higher education and getting used to American ways.

Although Eui Wha is in direct line of succession to the throne, he will be fortunate indeed if he at last wears the crown without having to fight for it. He has left behind him in Korea many active enemies to the royal house, as well as other princes who are also ambitious. It is rumored, too, that he has been induced to go abroad by some of the conspirators in order that he may be well out of the way when a plot to seat another prince is sprung. But the prince does not look as if these possibilities worried him much, for when last seen he was enjoying himself hugely and had decided that the United States is a fine country.

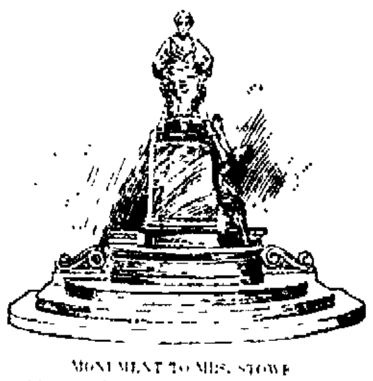
IN MEMORY OF MRS. STOWE.

Connecticut Will Honor the Author of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" With a Monument.

In spite of unusual discouragements, the people of Connecticut will honor the name of Harriet Beecher Stowe by the erection of a stately monument to her memory.

The scheme to give expression to the public appreciation of the gifted authoress was inaugurated a few months ago by the Harriet Beecher Stowe monument committee, which was organized at that time. The avowed purpose of the committee was to erect a splendid statue of Mrs. Stowe which should have place within the state capitol.

To the great astonishment of the movers in this enterprise the Rev. Charles E. Stowe, son of the creator of "Uncle Tom," came out in a letter in the Hartford Courant, strongly protesting against the proposition to erect what he called "a brazen monstrosity scowling the unfortunate beholder out of countenance from its granite pedestal." He suggested that a more appropriate testimonial would be the establishment of a Harriet Beecher Stowe scholarship at Hampton, Fisk or Tuskegee. His principal objection to the monument scheme, however, appeared to be that such action on the part of the public would be a usurpation of the rights of the children who had, in fact, already given an order to the New England Granite company for the erection of a granite shaft over the grave at Andover, Mass., on which was to be carved, "Erected by Her Children."



MONUMENT TO MRS. STOWE.

This unexpected opposition was a serious drawback to the progress of the committee's work, but, nothing daunted, it continued its efforts on the line mapped out, maintaining that Mrs. Stowe had outgrown private citizenship, and that the public had the right to pay tribute to her goodness and greatness in whatever manner it chose.

In pursuance of its purpose the committee secured the introduction of two bills in the legislature, asking authority to place a statue of Mrs. Stowe either in the capitol or on the capitol grounds and an appropriation of $5,000 toward the statue itself.

The committee has gone on independently and has collected a large part of the $25,000 required.

Mr. W. Clark Noble, the sculptor employed by the committee for the work, says that the statue will be completed within a few months. It will be of heroic dimensions and will rest on a granite pedestal. At the right of the figure will be Uncle Tom, with hands upstretched and broken shackles falling from them. A laurel wreath will rest at the base on the other side.

Wanted to Be Truthful.

The sour and surly looking visitor called the little boy to him and took him on his knee. It so happened that at this particular time he wished to make friends with him in order to stand well with his parents.

"I like little boys," said the visitor.

The boy looked as if he doubted it, but he held his peace.

"That is," explained the visitor, in order that there should be no mistake, "I like good little boys, and you're a good little boy, aren't you?"

"Well," returned the boy cautiously, "there are a lot worse than me on our street."

"I want that you should like me, too," persisted the visitor.

Again the boy was wise enough to hold his peace, but he looked as if he thought the job was a pretty big one. The expression was not lost on the visitor.

"Don't you like me now?" he asked.

The boy looked at the visitor and sighed. Then he looked at his father, and his expression was one of great doubt.

"Pop," he said at last, "does all that stuff that you told me about never telling a lie go or not?"

Then the meeting was promptly adjourned amid considerable confusion.—Chicago Post.

HIRONS' VEGETONE.

It can be Procured at Your Druggists.

Use Hirons Double Treatment for Catarrh and Hay Fever.

Use Hirons New Asthma and Cough Cure for Asthma, Bronchitis, Pneumonia, Coughs, Colds, Throat and Lung Troubles.

Vegetone is purely vegetable in its composition. It is a reliable and permanent cure for diseases of the liver and kidneys, constipation, chills, maliarial fever, loss of appetite, and a sure and effectual cure for headache and dyspepsia.

Vegetone acts by giving tone to the stomach, strengthening the liver and kidneys, and assists these most important organs in throwing off the impurities in the blood. Every person, in the spring of the year, needs a good, safe tonic for the replenishing of the system after a winter of inactivity, and Vegetone will produce the desired effects, being purely vegetable and a mild, pleasant laxative, thus throwing off the bile from the stomach, producing new vigor.

CATARRH.

One of the most troublesome and dangerous diseases known to mankind, can in the large majority of cases, be permanently cured. Many who were victims to that disease have been cured, and many more are being cured. Double treatment for Catarrh does its work effectually; clearing it out of the head, driving it out of the blood, where it exists, and ever will exist, unless the health destroying virus is eradicated from the system. Cure it. For it is not only a constant discomfort, but a perpetual menace to life. Use the New Asthma and Cough Cure as the blood purifier, and the Speedy Catarrh Cure for the nasal treatment for Catarrh, and soon those troublesome and distressing symptoms will disappear. The constant dripping of the mucous into the throat, and the pain in the head will cease. The hearing, sight, smell, and taste will be restored.

HAY FEVER.

Hay Fever, or Hay Asthma as it is often called, is a combination of Bronchial and Nasal affections. The immediate cause and source of irritation being of external origin, attacking individuals during the months of May, June and August. The pollen of hay, dried grasses and rag-weed comes in contact with the nasal and bronchial membranes, involving all the air passages, causing immediate irritation, frequently disabling persons afflicted therewith. The great discomfort and suffering, say nothing of the the loss of life caused by this terrible disease, may be avoided by using Hirons' Double Treatment, which is a sure, safe and permanent cure. Commence using the medicine at once, and get your system in condition to resist the effect of these agencies upon the mucous membrane, thereby keeping the tissues in a healthy condition.

MRS. CHARLES C. ADAMS,

Hirons Medicine Co., Room 3, Schmitz Block, City:

Having been a great sufferer from that most distressing disease, asthma, and having used your Asthma Remedy for the last few months, I can certify very cheerfully, that it has afforded me great relief, and I feel confident that in the majority of cases, will accomplish a permanent cure.

Respectfully yours,

A. A. CHAPIN.

Believes It Saved Her Life.

The Hirons Medicine Co.

GENTLEMEN:—I wish to tell you how thankful we are for the great good your medicine has done for our daughter, Mrs. John Metcalf. We sincerely believe that it saved her life. In November she had a bad case of LaGrippe, it left her with an awful cough. Our family physician informed her husband that she was threatened with consumption. We knew not what course to pursue, until one day when Mrs. Metcalf was reading your advertisement in the WEEKLY SENTINEL she resolved to try a bottle of your new Asthma and Cough Cure. After using the remedy for a short time she was able to sit up in bed. In two weeks she was up and around. Her cough ceased, and now she is entirely cured, and advises all who have lung or throat trouble to give your medicine a trial.

Yours Truly,

SAMUEL DISLER.

What the Resident Manager of the Chicago Newspaper Union Has to Say.

The Hirons Medicine Co., Fort Wayne, Ind.

GENTLEMEN:—Your Mr. A. R. Hirons persuaded me to give your Double Treatment for catarrh a trial, and after having used it about 30 days, I can honestly say that the results have been very satisfactory. I have been a sufferer from the disease since childhood, and was so bad at times that the membrane would bleed constantly. By the use of your medicine I have stopped the bleeding, my head is greatly relieved, and I have no more difficulty with my breathing. Yours truly,

CHARLES D. TILLO.

A Hay-fever Victim Made Happy.

The Hirons Medicine Co., Fort Wayne, Ind.

GENTLEMEN:—I have been afflicted with Hay-Fever in its most malignant form for years. The first attack would appear in June. During August and September My sufferings were intense. Water would run from my eyes and nose, the paroxysm of sneezing were uncontrollable, and I had terrible burning pains in my head. I learned of your Double Treatment for Catarrh and Hay-Fever and procured it at once. After having used three bottles of the remedies I was entirely cured. I heartily endorse your valuable medicine, and advise all Hay-Fever sufferers to give it a trial. (SIGNED.)

At the Grand Canyon of the Yellowstone.

"Where the road turns to the left at Grand View, walk out over the salient of rock at the angle itself, sit down on the farthest chimney shaft, over rocks naturally white, but now blackened by weathering. If possible, go there in the morning or in the latter part of the afternoon. At noontime the light is too strong, and the details of the canyon are smothered, and the individuality of the walls killed. But with a soft morning or afternoon light every detail of one or the other of the walls leaps out from the general mass as if instinct with life. And what a wonderful sea it is that lies beneath and beyond us. A painted sea, not of water but of rock. And such painting! Try to distinguish the decided colors and their infinite variations. The most wonderful part of it is the rare blending, where one fades into another, and yet thou canst detect neither the beginning nor the ending."

The above is taken from "Wonderland 97," a new tourist book that tells all about Yellowstone Park.

The designs are especially chic, and the contents, as always, the original work of original writers.

The opening article is a particularly valuable one by that matriarch among American women, Mrs. Mary A. Livermore, on "The Solidarity of our Social Life." Maria Louise Pool contributes a bit of graceful fiction. An article full of helpful suggestions is "Rest, and How to Take it Most Beneficially." Mary Gay Humphreys, Helen Marshall North, and other well known writers deal with topics of general interest.

CABINET MEETS

In Special Session to Discuss National Matters.

Senator Pettigrew Presents Japan's Reasons for Adopting the Gold Standard and Comments Thereon.

WASHINGTON, July 7.—President McKinley last night called a special meeting of the cabinet for today. The regular meeting would not have occurred until Friday and there were some matters which he desired to give early consideration. It is understood that one matter under consideration was the sending of a message to congress on the currency question and another one the tariff bill and the advisability of recommending any changes in it before it passed to the conference stage.

The senate met today with a definite agreement made last night that the final vote on the tariff bill would be taken before the day's session closed. It appeared to have little effect in stimulating public interest, as there was not that rush to the galleries marking the advent of an important event. The chaplain's opening prayer gave thanks for the sinking of transient and local issues and besought "that the tariff bill may disappoint the fears of its opponents and exceed the hopes of its advocates in its effect upon public prosperity and activity."

Senator Pettigrew today presented in the senate a statement prepared by himself, giving Japan's reasons for adopting the gold standard, together with translations of the currency law of that country, the speech of Minister of Finance Matsukata, in presenting this measure, and the report of the Japanese currency commission. Mr. Pettigrew says that from a careful reading of the speech of Count Matsukata in presenting the measure he is convinced that the gold standard has been adopted entirely in the interests of the creditor classes of Japan and for the purpose of preventing a further decline in the purchasing power of their credits. The senator also advances the idea that the manufacturing classes have been induced to accept the change by the argument that it would crystalize the advantage Japan already has over gold using countries as an appreciation of gold in the past and thus prevail and make certain her advantage in the future. Senator Pettigrew says that since the Chinese war prices have risen about 30 per cent. and the creditor classes have become alarmed because of the general adoption of the gold standard. The power and influence of the creditor classes in Japan have been greatly enhanced by the debt incurred as a result of the war, the situation thus presenting many features similar to that which induced Germany in 1873, England in 1816, and the United States in 1873, to adopt the gold standard. "In every instance," the senator says, "the producers of wealth are not considered. It is, the minister of finance in Japan argued, that the increased price will increase exports from Japan, and therefore the manufacturing classes were interested, but he makes no argument which appeals to the farming classes, notwithstanding that farming is the paramount industry of Japan."

Senator Pettigrew concludes that the result of this recent step on the part of Japan must be the same there as elsewhere, saying: "It cannot help but result in the further appreciation of gold and a corresponding apparent decline in the value of silver, as well as a decline in the gold price of all products, which will check Japan's wonderful industrial prosperity and transfer her industries to China, if China remains upon a silver basis. Already gold has increased sufficiently to make a profit in exporting it from Japan and a slight percentage of advantage in manufacturing all kinds of goods in China over the manufacture of like goods in Japan."

He concludes that as a result Japan will also experience "the same ruin to her agricultural classes that has resulted to agriculture in every gold standard country in the world."

Senator Davis chairman of the committee on foreign relations, has called a meeting of the committee for Friday for the purpose of considering the Hawaiian annexation treaty. It was at one time thought that the treaty would not be considered with a view of reporting it this session, but it is now the intention of the friends of annexation to report the treaty.

A renewal of attention to the Spanish Cuban affairs was promised in a report by Mr. Lodge, from the committee on foreign affairs. It recites wrongs and injuries inflicted on August Bolten and Gustave Richelieu at Santa de Cuba in 1895, the unavailing demands of the United States government on Spain for indemnity and then empowers the president "to take such measures as in his judgement may be necessary to obtain the indemnity from the Spanish government for the wrongs and injuries, etc., and to secure this end he is authorized and requested to employ such means or exercise such power as may be necessary."

WILL DELIVER A MESSAGE.

After a discussion, lasting over an hour, the cabinet today decided that the president should send to congress a message recommending a legislation providing for a commission to adjust the currency question of the country. It was resolved that this message should be sent to congress tomorrow, providing that the tariff bill is by that time passed by the senate. It is the expectation of the president that the subject will receive the attention of congress during the present extra session of congress. The message itself is written and it is short. Its principal feature is a quotation from the president's inaugural address on the financial subject. The tariff bill was not considered at the meeting today except in its bearing on the currency commission proposition.

THE MINERS' STRIKE.

All the River Miners Have Quit Work.

For the First Time in a Strike All Classes of Miners are United. The [illegible] Operating.

PITTSBURG, Pa., July 7.—Reports received from the river mines in the Pittsburg district indicate that there is almost a total suspension of work in the pits today and that the strike so far as the river miners are concerned is general. A dispatch from Monongahela City says: "The bitter feeling between the river and railroad miners that has always interfered when a strike was inaugurated heretofore and prevented good results, has been lost sight of and organized, unorganized and imported miners have joined in one faith and for one purpose. Today there are about fifty men at work and 7,000 idle in the Monongahela valley. But few men are at work in the Champion mine, operated by the Tide Coal company, and they are working out a contract which expires this month. Yesterday a few miners were working at the Drill, Apollo, Acme, Foster and Clark mines, but nothing is being done at those pits today. Such a complete suspension of mining has not been witnessed in the Monongahela valley before for many years.

Representatives of several Central Pennsylvania and West Virginia coal concerns are in the city. Several operators whose offices they had visited said there would be no trouble in filling urgent orders held by the Pittsburg operators, even should the suspension here become thoroughly general. It was said that representatives of Pennsylvania and West Virginia companies were here trying to relieve local operators of Pittsburg contracts. The West Virginia representatives claimed their state would be able to supply the whole market during the strike, but could not attempt to ship to the lakes.

THROUGH THE DRAW

Plunges an Electric Car on a Michigan Line.

Mrs. McClelland and Three Children Drowned—Conductor and Motorman Escape.

BAY CITY, Mich., July 7.—An interurban electric car, bound for Saginaw from this city, crashed through the open draw of the high iron bridge, three miles south of this city at 11 o'clock today and the seven passengers were carried down into the river.

Mrs. McClelland, three children, from this city, were drowned.

The three other passengers were men. The latter were seriously injured but will recover.

The river was dragged for the bodies of the drowned and later that of the woman was pulled out with a pike pole.

The car was in charge of Motorman Herbert Riley and Conductor James O'Brien, both of whom escaped with slight injuries by jumping. The three male passengers jumped, but all were injured. One of the latter was E. E. Gerkens, assistant general freight agent of the Michigan Central. He was partially out of the window when the car went through and was injured about the arms and body.

Frank Mayo, of Essexville, was badly injured about the legs.

The exact cause of the accident is yet unknown, but it is believed the motorman was racing with an Flint and Pere Marquette train, which is a competitor for the suburban traffic and could not stop the car after the bridge had begun to fall in sight. T. P. Klump, a traveling man from Geneva, Ohio, was so badly injured that he cannot recover, and he was brought to this city and taken to St. Mary's hospital.

Old Police Force Under Bonds.

HUNTINGTON, Ind., July 7.—The metropolitan police commissioners have undisturbed control of the police department of the city since the arrest of the old police force for trying to hold on by councilmanic authority. All are out of jail under bond of $500. Vigorous efforts are, however, being made to secure a supersedeas from one of the supreme judges, although it is held by leading attorneys here that such a proceeding is impossible in injunction cases.

The funeral of Hans Roebker, the boy who was drowned was held this afternoon from the St. John's Lutheran church. Schoolmates of the deceased acted as pall bearers.

The funeral of Mr. Gerler will take place tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock from the St. Mary's Catholic church.

GOLD DEMOCRATS.

The Iowa Branch Holds a State Convention.

Cleveland Indites a Letter of Encouragement to Men Engaged in Combatting the Silver Movement.

DES MOINES, Iowa, July 7.—About 200 national democrats met in state convention today to nominate a state ticket. Judge Nathaniel French, of Davenport, was temporary chairman. When in his address Grover Cleveland was referred to in connection with the Pullman strike, there was the wildest enthusiasm. Mr. French said in part:

"Your presence today proves that the democratic party still lives. This country has seen the birth and death of many political parties. One party alone, born with the nation, has lived through victory and defeat and you are here today to proclaim anew its undying principles. The vitality of the democratic party is due to its grasp of the principles which underlie true government. The ancient theory of government was essentially paternalistic and regarded the citizen as the property of the state having only such rights as it might give him.

"The state was everything, the individual nothing. The true theory of government, which is the basis of your faith, is that the citizen has certain inalienable rights of his own, his as an individual and not as the gift of any state. The government belongs to him and not he to the government.

"It is supported by him, not he by it. The only powers possessed by the government are those voluntarily given it by the individuals composing the people, to secure by united action the just rights of each. The faith of the democratic party is the individual, in his right to personal liberty, in his ability to care for himself and the government also, made it strong with the people and won its greatest triumphs. It has at times wandered from the faith and met reversal defeat, but though the organization may have gone astray temporarily, there always remained steadfast a body of true democrats, guarding the temple and ready to welcome back the erring brothers to the worship of the true faith. True democrats stood on guard at Indianapolis; true democrats are here on guard today.

"The panic and the resulting hard times have caused the republicans to shut out the mine owners from their camp, but can we be sure that the banishment is not more than temporary? It was only after a close contest at St. Louis that the republican party declared for honest money. Honest money was the all important issue in the last campaign. A special session of a republican congress has been called by a republican president. It has been in session for months. Has it acted on the currency question? Has it made certain to the people of this country and the people of the world that the United States will pay its debts in dollars worth 100 cents? That the debts of the people will be paid according to the gold standard on which they were contracted and that people may safely engage in business, lending and selling with full confidence that obligations received will not be discharged in a depreciated currency? Have any of these things been done by the republican party in redemption of its pledges? Or has the whole session been spent in playing the old game of grab?

"The Chicago platform is instructive only in teaching how free government should not be carried on. We cannot look for relief to men capable of such an unparalled mass of heresies, neither can we look for guidance to any convention which endorses such a system. The real stock in trade of the free silver agitator is the hard times, which it largely caused. The hope that some change of the condition for better times causes many men to vote for any quack remedy proposed. Take away from the agitator the calamity cry and his occupation is gone.

"Silver has its proper use in the minor transactions of commerce and when maintained at a parity with gold, through the limitation of coinage and other safeguards serves as a useful tool which no one would discard. The use of silver with gold in this way furnishes the only practical bimetallic currency.

"With restored confidence the people will again show their unequaled powers of production. The present business will grow in volume, new enterprises will be undertaken, labor will be employed and general prosperity restored. One party, both by traditions and principles, is peculiarly adapted to the work of reform in our currency. It is the old democratic party. Last year it saved the people from disaster and the nation from dishonor. The same battle is on again and like true soldiers you have answered the call. Standing on the platform made by fearless patriots at Indianapolis, upon the everlasting rocks of truth and justice, you will unfurl the old flag. You will choose your leaders and prepare them for the fray with a courage which can only live in the hearts of men, for no selfish gain, but for the highest of all blessings—justice and freedom for all."

CLEVELAND'S LETTER.

GRAY GABLES, BUZZARDS BAY, Mass., June 29, 1897.

[illegible]

MY DEAR SIR:—My love of true democracy is so intense and my judgment in the necessity of its supremacy to the welfare of the country is so clear that I cannot fail to sympathize with every effort to save the principles of my party from threatened abandonment. I believe the very existence of true democracy as an agency for the good of the American is in the hands of those who are willing to be guided by the declaration of principles announced by the national democratic party. It is a high mission to thus have in keeping the life and usefulness of the party which has served so well our countrymen and the important consideration involved should surely stimulate to patriotic effort. The work before us rises above partisan triumphs and its immediate rewards. The question is are we doing our duty to our country and to the principles of our party?

No success worth the name can be reached except in the path of principle. I hope the national democrats of Iowa will not wait to exhibit to their fellows in every state the bright light of true democracy.

"Yours very respectfully,
"GROVER CLEVELAND."

NEW YORK MYSTERY

Authorities Believe That It Has Been Solved.

Martin Thorn Arrested and Makes a Confession Giving All the Details of the Crime.

NEW YORK, July 7.—Positive identification of the man arrested last night as Martin Thorn, the alleged confederate in the murder and dismemberment of William Guldensuppe was made today. Mrs. Hafliss, of Woodside, L. I., called at the police station and after seeing Thorn said that she had seen him about the house in Woodside where Guldensuppe is supposed to have been butchered. Acting Inspector O'Brien said today that he had in his possession a full confession from Thorn admitting [illegible] Guldensuppe and giving [illegible] details of the crime.

Acting Inspector O'Brien thinks he knows where Thorn dropped the head of Guldensuppe into the river and says he is going to arrange for the dragging of the river at that point this afternoon. He also says that Thorn in his confession to a friend, said that he has been disappointed in the house at Woodside, as the drain from the bath tub, instead of running into a sewer, ran into a ditch outside the house.

Wants Peace Between Turkey and Greece.

Suggests That the Powers Take Action to Hasten the Conclusion of Peace Negotiations.

CONSTANTINOPLE, July 7.—Russia has sent a circular note to the powers, suggesting that steps be taken to expedite the conclusion of peace between Greece and Turkey. This action upon the part of Russia is regarded here as being of the greatest importance and as indicating that Russia desires to forestall a similar proposal upon the part of the other powers.

Both the palace and the Turkish ministers were immediately informed of Russia's action. The German ambassador here, Baron Saurma Von Jeltsch, has received fresh and precise instructions to insist upon Turkey's acceptance of the strategic frontier proposed by the powers.

HOW IT FEELS.

Harry L. Taylor Experiments on Himself in the Electric Chair.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., July 7.—Harry L. Taylor, of Corning, N. Y., has been making experiments on himself in the electric chair. He describes the sensation of electrocution in this language:

"A sudden shock is felt at first, as if someone had struck you on the head with a heavy mallet. There is no pain. The brain feels benumbed. Bright lights dance and flash before your eyes. Your head feels abnormally large, somewhat like that of a person troubled with vertigo. A heavy weight seems to be bearing down upon your head. The pulse is high and an exhilarated feeling takes possession of you. You feel as if you were treading the air with everything around you a blank. You are alone—the only being, the only object, the only tangible thing in the universe. You gradually sink into insensibility.

"A fierce shock suddenly passes through your entire system. You are again struck on the head with the mallet, the same bright lights dazzle before your eyes, and then all is a blank. This second shock is caused by the withdrawal of electrification, or, as commonly expressed, when the current is turned off."

Mrs. Wm. Pollock, who fell and broke her leg on Monday, is not getting along as well as could be expected, she being pretty old, and the warm weather affecting her. It is believed good care will bring her through all right.

JACK, THE EXPOSER.

Police Hear Complaints of His Reappearance.

Profane Boys on Hanna Street Will be Looked After—Farm Residence of William Kohlmeyer Robbed.

The police on the southside beats have been notified to exercise the utmost diligence toward apprehending a disreputable person who, by reason of his shameless exhibitions, has been named "Jack, the Exposer." The fellow, who is described as a tall, angular man, was seen on East DeWald street about dusk last evening. When the police arrived he was gone.

PROFANE BOYS.

A crowd of hoodlums who have been conducting open air meetings on Hanna street, between Lewis and Montgomery streets, have been making it so unpleasant for the residents of that neighborhood that the mayor has been requested to stop the nuisance. The chief aim of the young debaters appears to be in the direction of seeing who can swear the longest and loudest oath.

ROBBED A FARMER.

Yesterday Sheriff Melching was summoned to Adams station to arrest a negro who burglarized the residence of William Kohlmeyer, in that vicinity, and secured $15 in money, a gold watch and other articles. The negro was cornered by the residents of that section, when he whipped out a big pocket knife and scared the whole crowd. The fellow answers to the description of a colored man the police had under surveillance in this city last Monday. He escaped.

SAD ECHOES.

Fourth Brings Grief to Several Unfortunates.

Frank Studabaker Loses His Right Hand—Andrew Pollock's Right Arm Blown Off by a Cannon.

Frank Studabaker, a young man of Bluffton, who makes frequent visits to this city, had his right hand blown off by the premature explosion of a giant firecracker while celebrating the Fourth of July last Monday night. The flesh was so badly mangled that amputation was necessary. Young Studabaker is the son of David Studabaker and a grandson of the venerable John Studabaker, who is one of the leading financiers of northern Indiana.

Andrew Pollock, a citizen of Warsaw, while loading a cannon had his right arm blown off by the premature discharge of the piece. A bystander was also injured.

STOPPED A RUNAWAY.

Timely Act of Herman Leitz Prevents a Possible Serious Accident.

This morning a horse attached to Theodore Thorward's yeast wagon, was left standing in front of a South Calhoun street store while the driver, Mr. Erickson, went in to transact some business. The animal started north on the thoroughfare at a rattling pace, with the lines dragging on the ground. Herman Leitz, the well known clerk of the Fruit house, who was a passenger on a belt line car, saw the runaway approaching near DeWald street, and alighting from the car he caught the bridle rein and brought the steed to a standstill. He was dragged several feet but was not injured.

Were Married at a Deathbed.

ANDERSON, Ind., July 7.—Miss Maggie Arnan and Frank Donovan were married today under peculiar circumstances. The ceremony was solemnized over the remains of Donovan's mother. They stood on both sides of the body, and Father Mulcahey officiated. Mrs. Donovan had long desired that the two be married, and when she realized that the end was at hand she insisted on her son carrying out her wish. He sent for Miss Arnan and Father Mulcahey, but the latter arrived a few moments too late.

THE COURTS.

More Habeas Corpus in the Case of Clatya Hoover.

This Time the Father Made the Application—A $2,000 Damage Suit—Notes.

Clatia Hoover seems to be making considerable trouble for the matron of the Allen county orphan's asylum and the courts. Two writs of habeas corpus have been issued on application of the child's mother and this morning on application of John Hoover, the father, Judge Dawson issued the third writ against the matron, Ida Overmeyer. The matron is ordered to bring the child into court Saturday at 9 a. m.

WANT DAMAGES.

Conrad and Minnie Nagel commenced suit for $2,000 damages in the circuit court against the Woodburn Lumber company for failure to fulfill contract. Plaintiffs allege that they had entered into an agreement to rent from the lumber company a building for hotel purposes. Later a better offer was made for the building and the defendants refused to rent the building to plaintiffs. S. Sylvester is plaintiffs' attorney.

NOTES.

R. C. Bell brings suit to quiet title against the Old National bank and about fifty others.

J. Adam Zeigler and Emma Poss have been granted a license to wed.

An affidavit has been filed in Squire France's court charging Albert Barham with assault and battery on George Link.

A suit on account and for attachment was yesterday brought in the superior court by Lajos, Nelson & Ringmaster against T. H. Groves, who conducts the Chicago Bankrupt Clothing Store. The action is to recover $200, which the printing [illegible] claim is due them from the defendant.

MILK CASES.

Gottlieb Maurer Fined, but Judgment is Suspended.

Case of Miller, the Junk Man, Comes up This Afternoon—Charles Banke Arrested and Released—Notes.

Gottlieb Maurer, against whom an affidavit was filed charging him with selling milk that was below grade, was fined $5 and costs by Mayor Scheerer yesterday afternoon. City Bacteriologist Drayer testified that he had made an examination of the milk and found it not up to the standard set by the law. This does not indicate that Mr. Maurer has adulterated the article, but shows that the food given his cows was not of the health-giving quality for milk production. He promised the mayor that he would remedy the trouble, and it was evident that he meant well enough, and that there was no malicious intent in his case. The mayor stated that he would have to assess a fine of $5 and costs, but suspended judgment upon Mr. Maurer's promise to furnish better milk. A similar case was brought up against Henry McMakin, the dairyman, in the mayor's court this afternoon. Others will shortly follow.

This afternoon Officer Paul arrested three vagrants on West Main street. One of the offenders carried an ugly gun and bore an aspect that was suspicious. A charge of carrying concealed weapons will be preferred against him.

Charles Banke was arraigned before the mayor this morning for drunkenness, the outcome of too much Fourth of July enthusiasm. In view of the fact that Banke had a job at stake and a wife and eight children dependent upon him, the mayor discharged the prisoner.

The case against Miller, the junk man, charged with running his business without keeping the proper record, came up for trial before Mayor Scheerer this afternoon.

TREASURER FALLS DEAD.

Henry Heine, of DeKalb County, Dies at Breakfast Table.

AUBURN, Ind., July 7.—Henry Heine, treasurer of DeKalb county, dropped dead from heart failure while eating breakfast at his home in this city yesterday. He was in his usual health, never having suffered from heart disease before. He leaves a wife and several sons and daughters, among whom is Dr. F. M. Heine, of this city, who when he heard of his father's death fell in convulsions and for some time his life was despaired of, but he is now recovering. Mr. Heine has only been treasurer since Nov. 21, being elected by the democrats. His successor will probably be B. C. Robbins, a republican, cashier of the Farmers' bank of this city, who will be appointed by the county commissioners. Mr. Heine stood high in the county as an official and citizen. The funeral will be held Thursday afternoon in this city.

The American people can truly give thanks now that congress is about to adjourn.

Lieutenant Peary will depart on his new Arctic expedition next Saturday, and announces that he will adopt a new system of capturing the North Pole. A war cloud has appeared in Europe over the terms of peace between Turkey and Greece. The sultan refuses to have the powers adjust the differences between the two countries, and with three to seven hundred thousand soldiers in Thessaly he is so situated that he can put up a strong kind of a bluff. It looks as if the mighty powers will have to enforce their will or acknowledge by their silence that the sick man is the boss.

Senator Turpie and ex-Governor Matthews have not yet entered into any agreement with reference to the senatorship. One of Mr. Turpie's friends says that the senator has accepted an invitation to spend three weeks at the ex-governor's farm immediately after the adjournment of congress, and it is the understanding that the political aspirations of the two men will be thoroughly discussed during the stay of the senator.

Senator Fairbanks, as a native Ohioan, is well acquainted with Horace L. Chapman, the democratic nominee for governor of Ohio. The two men, though of opposing politics, are warm personal friends. When the fact became known that Chapman was nominated at Columbus, Senator Fairbanks immediately sent his Ohio friend a telegram congratulating him upon the honor conferred upon him, but expressing the opinion that he (Fairbanks) would have occasion in November to send another congratulatory telegram to Gov. Bushnell, Chapman's competitor.

Barney Barnato, the rich diamond speculator and millionaire, it is now stated, was simply worried to death. He attempted to personally look after the details of his enormous holdings, and in this way simply broke himself down. There seems to be no doubt that persistent overwork weakened him, mentally as well as physically, and that his mind was unbalanced at the time he plunged into the ocean to end his existence. His case affords a vivid illustration of the fact that too much wealth may be as destructive to human happiness as too much poverty.

GREAT CROWD.

Thirty Thousand People at Robison Park Monday.

The Multitude Was Handled With Ease Under the Perfect System of the Street Railway Company.

Monday was a proud day for the management of the Consolidated Street Railway, for not in the history of street railway traffic in Fort Wayne were so many people carried in one day. And it was done without a jar. The cars going out were crowded all through the day but the people were landed at the park safely. The critical period was when the rush was made for cars home. The twenty five cars running on the line were taxed to their utmost capacity between the hours of 8 o'clock in the evening and 2 o'clock in the morning. The park was then emptied of its mass of humanity and only a few stragglers remained until the last car at 3 a. m. It was a banner day for Robison park and it is a compliment to Manager Robison, Superintendent Stanton and Foreman Tony Lentz that everything went off like clockwork without an accident. Chief Clerk Gerke had not completed his count and was not able to give the accurate figures of the crowd, but a conservative estimate places it at 30,000.

H. T. Calver, who bears the cognomen of "King of Albinos," was one of the visitors at Robison park yesterday and he attracted the attention of all. Mr. Calver, although born in England only twenty-eight years ago, has the appearance at a distance of an old man, except that he is nervously active. He has the pink eye, white hair, eyebrows and mustache of the true Albino and, dressed in a costume different from that of other men, attracts attention wherever he goes. On the sleeves and back of his coat are the words, "Dr. Hobbs' Sparagus Kidney Pills," which indicates his mission in Fort Wayne. He is an expert window trimmer and has arranged to trim the show window of Grose & Pellens Thursday evening, when he will perform some wonderful feats in tearing paper into fanciful designs.

The Tabernacle meetings are now in progress on South Calhoun street, near Hamilton street. Services every afternoon and evening, at 2:30 and 7:30. The object of these meetings is not to organize a new denomination, nor to entice anybody to leave his church, but to lead souls to Jesus and believers into closer fellowship with the Lord—the Savior of the world, the Sanctifier of the believer, the Physician of the church and our coming Lord. Evangelists, J. E. Ramseyer and Ernest Baker.

THE SILENCE AND THE SONG.

Sing to me, girl of my heart.
Sing! The slain silence rejoices,
Pierced by that sweetest of voices.
Artless, yet higher than art,
And my soul by the song
Is wafted along
In the listening bliss that [illegible]
Never and never to part.

Sing to me, girl of my love!
Sing! And the angels in heaven—
To whom the rare rapture is given
To linger and listen above—
Folding their wings
While the melody rings
Till the soul of the silence is [illegible]
Hover about thee, my love?

Sing to me, fairest of girls!
Sing! The dead silence was golden,
But dearer the song shall be holden
Than riches of rubies and pearls.
And the silence new born
Of the songless morn
Shall sigh to be slain like the old one
Sing to me, fairest of girls!

A MATCHMAKER

Major Mackintosh was a very good fellow, but he had one little weakness. He was a most inveterate matchmaker.

No doubt there was some excuse for him. Life seemed rather empty and purposeless now that he had left the army, and as he was still a vigorous, energetic man he needed some wholesome vent for his activity. Matchmaking provided him at once with an interest and an occupation. It gave him plenty to think of by night and to do by day. Without it he would have been the most miserable of men. With it he was the cheeriest and the most self important. It is a very good thing sometimes to have a little weakness.

Of course, the major prided himself on his tact and delicacy and fondly fancied nobody ever saw through his transparent little artifices. So sure of this was he indeed that he not infrequently explained them at some length to the persons principally concerned, so that they might know just when and how to act under any given circumstances—a very wise precaution and one that saved an immense amount of trouble and misunderstanding.

But though he took every care to guard against failure matters would occasionally go wrong, and the most prudently planned match come to nothing, greatly to the major's dismay. But he was a reasonable man on the whole, and when he knew he was beaten he accepted defeat philosophically. Yes, when he knew he was beaten; but as a bold Briton and a soldier he was very hard to convince on this point and sometimes struggled on manfully long after defeat was a foregone conclusion.

Despite his weakness, or possibly even in consequence of it, the major was popular, and men and women alike found much to admire in him. His manner might be a little brusque, but his means were ample, and this was a great point in his favor, especially where the unmarried ladies of his acquaintance were concerned, for they were not blind to the fact that he (the matchmaker) would be a most excellent match, and to many of them it seemed a pity that he should spend so much time and trouble in providing for his friends' happiness while his own remained unsecured. More than one kind hearted woman, though taking small interest in his efforts to settle other people, would gladly have helped him to arrange a match for himself, but it was all to no purpose. Whether he saw nothing or too much no one knew, but the result was the same. The matchmaking major remained unmarried and on excellent terms with all the ladies who would willingly have married him, a fact which alone spoke volumes for his good feeling and capital management—if indeed it were not purely a matter of luck.

The major had but one near relative in the world, his nephew, Jack Mackintosh. Jack was in a government office, and as he was not 21 years of age his uncle began to think seriously of arranging a match for him. He had long had his eye on at least half a dozen sufficiently pretty girls, any one of whom might be just the right thing for the young fellow if only none of the other five should prove to be better. The major was very anxious that Jack's match should really be a triumph, and it cost him much thought and grave weighing of pros and cons for months before the critical time came. Of course he did not consult Jack in the matter. To do so at so early a stage in the proceedings would have been contrary to all precedent. No, he must muddle it out for himself and only have the boy down to make the lady's acquaintance when he had finally made up his mind as to which of the half dozen it was to be.

And, after all, it proved to be none of them.

No, despite the earnest cogitations of months and all the careful study of six specimens of girlhood the major suddenly made up his mind that Nellie Bloxham was the one woman in the world for Jack, and this within five minutes of his first introduction to her. The girl charmed him, and he at once decided that she must marry Jack. A letter was dispatched that very evening and a few days later the young fellow joined his uncle at the watering place where he had been so fortunate as to make Miss Bloxham's acquaintance.

"Well, Jack, have you got your leave, or is this only a Saturday to Monday trip?" was the first question he asked when they met at the station.

"I can stay a fortnight if you'll have me."

"That's capital. I've a lot of friends here and some uncommonly pretty girls among them. The Fishers came down last week, and the Renshaws."

"Is May Renshaw here? I'm glad of that."

May Renshaw was one of the half dozen who had been under consideration, and it is possible that Jack was aware of the fact, but of their recent rejection he was totally ignorant.

"May? Yes, I—I believe so."

The major spoke absently, for he was thinking how very unfortunate it would be if Jack really felt any attraction in that quarter. Not but what May was a nice girl enough—till you compared her with Nellie Bloxham. Let Jack once see Nellie and he would think no more of May.

Jack noticed the change of tone and drew his own conclusions from it.

"Any new acquaintances, uncle?" he asked. And there was a twinkle in his eye as he spoke which it was just as well the major did not see.

"A few. Yes, Jack, a few. Old Colonel Marsh and his sisters; pleasant women, though a bit elderly for you, you know, and Mrs. Bloxham and her daughter; charming girl, the daughter, though a bit young for me, of course."

"Ah, about the right age for me to play with, I suppose!"

There was some impatience in the young man's tone.

"To play with? No, no, Jack, you're too old for play now. It's quite time you settled, and I've been thinking"—

"Yes?" as he paused impressively, for the major felt that at last the time had come for him to speak.

"That Miss Bloxham is the very girl for you. In fact, that you're just cut out for each other."

"H'm!" said Jack.

It wasn't much of a remark perhaps, but the major found it distinctly disconcerting.

"Well, why not?" he asked testily.

"Why not? No reason perhaps. But then again—why?"

"Because she's pretty and good form and very good company, a thorough lady and a charming woman. Can't you trust my judgment in a matter of this kind?"

The major spoke with the assurance of one whom long experience entitled to speak with authority, and Jack smiled. Unfortunately his uncle saw the smile, and it irritated him.

"She's miles and away too good for you, you young dog, if that's what you mean," he broke out angrily.

"That's exactly what I do mean. If she's all the admirable things you say she is, I fail to see how we can be cut out for each other and shall feel bound in common fairness to let some better fellow cut me out. I'm not half good enough for her—if she's all you say she is."

The major burst out laughing.

"If that's all, come and have a look at her," he said, "and then you can judge for yourself. She is sure to be on the parade. They all are at this hour."

"Oh, yes, I'll have a look at her!" said Jack.

Jack was as good as his word.

He "had a look" at Miss Bloxham, and he was introduced to her. They talked together, the major beaming approval the while. He was introduced to her mother, a harmless, garrulous old lady, who talked whether there was anybody to listen or not and always about nothing in particular. Her talk was never allowed to interfere with general conversation, nor did she expect it to do so, which was but reasonable under the circumstances.

When the Bloxhams left the parade an hour or so later, the major and Jack walked with them as far as their own door, and Jack walked with Miss Bloxham.

"Well?" said the major as they turned away.

"Eh?" Jack was evidently not attending. A slight, pale faced little girl was passing at the moment and bowed to him with a shy smile.

"Who's that?" Major Mackintosh asked abruptly. It struck him that Jack was looking ridiculously pleased about something or other.

"The sister of a man in my office. I've been down to his place once or twice lately."

"Oh!" The major dismissed the subject. "Well, what do you think of her?"

"Of—her?"

"Yes. Isn't she all I said and more?"

"Oh, Miss Bloxham! Yes, she seems all right."

"All right! I should think she is all right. 'Pon my word, Jack, you take it coolly."

"Why, what would you have? She has talked to me about a lot of things for an hour or so, but I really know nothing about her, except that she is good looking and too good form to show that she is bored whatever she may feel."

"Bored? Why should she be bored? Didn't you talk to her?"

"Yes, and she'd much rather I hadn't. I wasn't the right man, uncle, that's all."

"Then, by Jove, I should like to know who is," the major said testily.

Jack laughed, but he did not pursue the subject further. After all, it was no affair of his, and if his uncle liked to play a little game of cross purposes he had no wish to interfere with him.

The next week passed away pleasantly enough. The major, taught by experience, knew just the kind of little expedition that was best qualified to throw young people together (possibly not always the right young people, but he was scarcely to blame for that), and he was constantly arranging some little pleasure party or another. Of course, none of these was complete without the Bloxhams and a quiet, shy girl, a great friend of Nellie's, in whom—somewhat to his surprise—the major recognized Jack's little acquaintance.

Millie Lee went everywhere with her friend, and as she was always sweet tempered and happy the major presently grew quite fond of her in a fatherly sort of way and looked forward to arranging a suitable marriage for her as soon as Jack should be off his mind. In the meantime he told her all about his plans for Jack and talked so freely himself on his pet project that he never noticed how she dropped into silence as soon as he alluded to it, especially as her silence evidently did not arise from any lack of interest. She was staying at a boarding house, and but for Nellie's kindness would have had a dull time of it.

The major observed with approval that Jack, too, was kind to her, for he thought it an excellent sign that he should wish to please Miss Bloxham by little attentions to her friend. On the whole, he was satisfied with the way things were going—or so he told himself—and he could not understand why he found a hitherto unknown difficulty in sounding Miss Bloxham on the subject and gently preparing the way for Jack's suit.

Of course Jack was in love with her. How could he fail to be, knowing her so well as he now did? Why, even he, the major, was more than half in love with her himself, as he owned, with a sigh to his cigar, and he was old enough to know the folly of it. How, then, should a young fellow like Jack escape? Now give them time. Nothing but time was needed now and a very little more of his judicious management to bring the matter to a successful conclusion and transform Miss Nellie Bloxham into Mrs. Mackintosh—Mrs. Jack Mackintosh. Ah, what a difference that one little word made!

The major called himself an old fool for his pains and refused to think of what perhaps might have happened had he only been a dozen or 15 years younger, but for him, a man of 50— Oh, no; it was out of the question.

And so the first week of Jack's visit came to an end.

The little expedition, however, did not come to an end. On the contrary, Major Mackintosh redoubled his exertions, for he was growing extraordinarily anxious to have the affair settled, and the more he saw of Nellie the more he was convinced that Jack would be the luckiest fellow in the world if he won her. And he must win her. The major felt that his reputation was at stake, for he had never labored to make any match as he had labored for this. Oh, he must speak seriously to Jack about it. As to Miss Bloxham, she must surely suspect something of his hopes, and she had not discouraged them. She always agreed readily to all his plans and treated him with marked consideration, and, of course, it must be on Jack's account. To imagine anything else would be— Oh, no; he wasn't quite such a fool as that.

"Jack, have you thought over what I said to you?" he asked abruptly one day as they were walking back to their hotel.

"What about? You've said a good deal at different times."

"Oh, about settling, you know."

"To be sure I have. There's a lot in it." This was distinctly encouraging, yet the major felt his heart sink unaccountably. "In fact, I think I shall act on it."

"You're thinking seriously of settling, my boy?"

"Most seriously. To tell the truth," and there was a twinkle in Jack's eye as he spoke, "I was just going to tell you that I've already asked—some one to settle me, and she's promised to do it."

There was a moment's silence. Then the major pulled himself together and wrung Jack's hand.

"I congratulate you with all my heart, my boy," he said huskily.

"Thank you. She's a dear little girl and thinks no end of you. She has no father, you see, and so"—

"Yes, yes, I quite understand." The major felt that this was a little too much. "I think she must know how I've set my heart on it," he added.

"Not a bit of it. She feared you had quite other views for me. Indeed, it was all Miss Bloxham and I could do to persuade her"—

"Her? Whom?"

"Why, Millie, of course. She fears you'll play the cruel uncle and object to my marrying her."

"Millie. Marrying Millie!"

"Yes. Surely you must have seen"—

"And what does Miss Bloxham say to this?"

"Oh, she's delighted. We are all such friends, you know."

"Friends! Marry Millie! And but for that little marplot you might have married Miss Bloxham"—

"Not a bit of it. You are mistaken there. Even had I ever wished it she wouldn't have had me."

"Who told you so?"

"Nobody, but I'm not quite a fool any more than you are quite 100, because— Uncle, Millie is not the marplot, but quite another person," significantly.

"By Jove!" exclaimed the major.

He was silent for some moments. When next he spoke, it was in a very different tone.

"Do you think I've any chance, Jack?"

Jack laughed, not unkindly.

"Go and see," he said.

And the major went.

So, after all, he made an excellent match for Miss Bloxham, and Mrs. Mackintosh never regretted that Jack was not the bridegroom.—Household Words.

A Curiosity of Literature.

John Heywood, the playwright and epigrammatist, was patronized by Henry VIII and Elizabeth. "What the 'Faerie Queene,'" says Warton, "could not procure for Spenser from the penurious Elizabeth and her parsimonious ministers Heywood gained by puns and conceits." The object of one of his books as disclosed by the title page, is singular, "A Dialogue, containing in effect the Number of all the Proverbs in the English Tongue, compact in a Matter concerning Two Marriages."

When the Marquis of Winchester, lord high treasurer, was presented with a copy of this book by the author, he inquired what it contained, and being answered, "All the proverbs in English," replied: "What! All? No, no. 'Bate me an ace, quoth Bolton,'" a form of speech once much in vogue. "By my faith," said Heywood, "that is not in."

It happened that the marquis casually uttered the only proverb not in the book.

Camden mentions an interview of Heywood with Queen Mary at which her majesty inquired what wind blew him to court. He answered, "Two specially, the one to see your majesty."

"We thank you for that," said the queen, "but I pray you what is the other?"

"That your grace," said he, "might see me."

The curious work on proverbs is in rhyme and contains many sayings that are now forgotten as well as allusions to superstitions still remaining.—Harper's Round Table.

New York and St. Petersburg.

The island of the Manhattoes sent beaver skins to Europe soon after Queen Elizabeth died. In 1626, only one year after the death of King James I, a permanent town was established upon it. And the first great chapter in the story of this town was closed in 1664, only four years after Charles II picked up his father's battered crown. Then New Amsterdam passed from Dutch into English hands and was rechristened for the Duke of York, 21 years before he began to govern it as James II. Thus the silver tankard owned by the Schuyler family and given to their ancestor by Queen Anne when he took five Mohawk chiefs to visit her in 1710 is by no means a relic of early New York. Who thinks of St. Petersburg as a typically modern town? Yet in 1710 St. Petersburg had been founded only half a dozen years.—Mrs. Schuyler Van Rensselaer in Century.

Anecdotes of Artists.

The memorial exhibitions bring out some interesting anecdotes of the painters represented at them. Here is one concerning Leighton: In painting [illegible] pictures, where every [illegible] models were, he was much troubled with the pigeons which frequented [illegible] behind the house. [illegible] upon some one's suggestion he gave them some grain steeped in whisky, whereupon they [illegible] as long and as often as he wished.

Here is another concerning Alfred Hunt. He was at the same time both a very slow and a fastidiously punctilious sketcher from nature—a combination which is said to have hastened his end, for he had a block for every hour of the day and every condition of weather and, overladen with these, he would often trudge a lengthy distance to his work. He would then start, say, on an incomplete morning effect in sunshine, to be cast aside for a similar subject in shadow if the scene clouded over, or for a noonday one directly that hour was reached. It is said that he consequently sometimes carried as many as a dozen varieties of the same view.

IS IT A TRIFLE?
That Common Trouble, Acid Dyspepsia or Sour Stomach.
Now Recognized as a Cause of Serious Disease.
Acid dyspepsia, commonly called heartburn or sour stomach, is a form of indigestion resulting from fermentation of the food. The stomach being too weak to promptly digest it, the food remains until fermentation begins, filling the stomach with gas, and a bitter, sour, burning taste in the mouth is often present. This condition soon becomes chronic and being an every day occurrence is given but little attention. Because dyspepsia is not immediately fatal many people do nothing for the trouble.
Within a recent period a remedy has been discovered prepared solely to cure dyspepsia and stomach troubles. It is known as Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets and is now becoming rapidly used and prescribed as a radical cure for every form of dyspepsia.
Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets have been placed before the public and are sold by druggists everywhere at 50 cents per package. It is prepared by the Stuart Chemical Co., Marshall, Mich., and while it promptly and effectually restores a vigorous digestion, at the same time is perfectly harmless and will not injure the most delicate stomach, but on the contrary by giving perfect digestion strengthens the stomach, improves the appetite and makes life worth living.

SHOP AND RAIL.

A Pennsylvania Freight Meets With an Accident.

An Employe of the Bass Works Has a Hand Injured—A Moulder To be Married Tonight—Other and Shops.

Seven Pennsylvania cars, all empty, were derailed at Colehour last night causing a wreck which delayed the train about two hours, but did not block the tracks so as to interfere with traffic to any great extent. Brakeman W. E. Birt, who resides on Baker street, was on one of the wrecked cars and was thrown to the ground. He escaped with a sprained ankle, which injury was attended to by Dr. Sarnson this morning when the unfortunate man reached the city. The cars were derailed by a brakebeam dropping upon the tracks.

PAINFUL ACCIDENT.

Henry Enghausen, an employe of the Bass foundry, had his left hand badly injured yesterday afternoon. In an apparent absent minded manner, he laid his hand upon the cog wheels of a big roller which was in motion and the member was drawn into the cogs, breaking two or three bones and lacerating the flesh of the palm and fingers. The second finger was so badly crushed that Dr. J. W. McCausland, the attending surgeon, had to amputate it at the knuckle joint. The report that both of Mr. Enghausen's hands had been injured and that he would have to suffer amputation of one of them is erroneous.

WILL MARRY QUIETLY.

A wedding which will cause no little surprise will be that of Adam G. Zeigler and Miss Emma Penn, which will be solemnized at the residence of the groom's mother, on Maple avenue, this evening, Rev. Philip Wambsganss, of Emanuel's German church, officiating. Mr. Zeigler is a moulder employed by the Bass works.

CHANGE IN ROUTE OF FARM PRODUCTS.

Two or three years ago all the grain exported from the United States passed through New York, Philadelphia, Boston or Baltimore. Since then new ports have been opened and one of them, New Orleans, is second on the list in the volume of grain exported. This change of route to the seaboard is responsible for no little portion of the loss sustained by the trunk lines by a falling off the past two years in their eastbound freights. In commenting on the efforts of the New York mercantile bodies to recover the business of former years, the Baltimore Sun says: "The recent efforts of New York merchants to augment their volume of business by manipulating rates of transportation are in effect a confession of the fact that their city's preeminence in the export and import trade and in the jobbing and distributing trade is declining. Formerly, under the operation of natural forces, New York controlled almost the whole commercial movement on the Atlantic seaboard. Business came to her without effort on her part, and such crumbs of commerce as fell to Baltimore and other southern ports were conceded with kindly indifference. But now this is all changed. Changing conditions have shifted the tide of business to other cities. Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Norfolk on the Atlantic, and New Orleans and Galveston on the gulf now divide with New York the volume of traffic she formerly monopolized. She still has the lion's share but wants it all. The effort to deprive Baltimore of its corn export trade by getting the railroads to abolish the long standing 'differential' is one expression of New York's greedy state of mind. The new expedient of utilizing the Trunk line and Joint Traffic associations to prevent southern and western merchants from stopping in Baltimore is another."

GOOD TIMES IN MISSOURI.

One of the evidences of the improving condition of business along the line of the Missouri, Kansas and Texas railway is shown in the resumption of full time in the extensive shops of that road in Sedalia, Mo. From this on the employes will work nine hours per day and six days a week.

A BACK YARD OBSERVATORY.

A Big Homemade Telescope Owned by an Amateur Astronomer.

In the back yard of a modest little house on the outskirts of Chicago is set up the seventh largest telescope in the United States. Not even the learned astronomers of the University of Chicago who have the use of the largest telescope in the country and who might be supposed to take an interest in the struggles of other star gazers, knew of the existence of this telescope until the other day.

The big glass was [illegible] and is owned by L. P. Culver, who is only an amateur astronomer, but is a very enthusiastic one. He is about 40 years of age and is entirely unknown to the scientific world. In fact, until a few years ago he was a drummer by profession. Mr. Culver was born and reared on a farm near Lansing, Mich. He attended the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor, and it was there that he became fascinated with the study of the stars. The year before he graduated he made his first telescope. It was a small, crude affair, with only an inch and a half aperture, but it served his purpose for the time being.

When Culver left college and took a position as traveling salesman for a manufacturing concern, he carried his glass along with him together with a folding stand, and whenever possible set it up and watched the stars. Of course a drummer with astronomical proclivities was such an unusual combination that he was made the subject of a great deal of ridicule and had to stand many sneers, but he persisted and kept on with his study. After the first year he was able to buy a little larger glass.

Mr. Culver finally married and gave up the drumming business. He settled in Chicago and purchased a home. About the time the project of the great Yerkes telescope was first talked about. He read the description of the great observatory which was being built to receive it and he resolved to himself that he might build an observatory of his own and a glass to put in it.

CULVER'S OBSERVATORY.

Learning that Professor Ritchie had built an 8 inch reflecting telescope, he wrote to him asking an interview. Professor Ritchie gave Culver many valuable suggestions and so much encouragement that the latter determined to attempt the construction of a 12½ inch telescope which would have a range of from [illegible] diameters. The [illegible] of adjustments and mechanical contrivances demanded made the task a most difficult one for the inexperienced telescope maker, but he finally accomplished it. For want of a better location he mounted the glass in the garden behind his house and has it inclosed in a 12 sided observatory having a revolving turret, which is the wonder of the neighborhood.

A KOREAN PRINCE.

Comes to America to Add Occidental Polish to His Oriental Education.

From faraway Korea comes Crown Prince Eui Wha to finish his education in the United States and add an occidental polish to his worldly wisdom. The prince expects that some day he will be called upon to rule over Korea, and he wants to be prepared with a broader view of life and a more liberal understanding of men and affairs than he would have if he remained at home. Besides, it is safer for him abroad, for Korea is in a turbulent state politically, and the prince has already escaped from several conspiracies against his life.

Eui Wha has thus far had the best educational advantages to be found anywhere in the orient. For a year he has been an attendant at the celebrated Japanese school of Fuku Zawa, an institution much affect-

Wanted to Be Truthful.

The stout and early looking visitor called the little boy to him and took him on his knee. It so happened that at this particular time he wished to make friends with him in order to stand well with his parents.

"I like little boys," said the visitor.

The boy looked as if he doubted it, but he held his peace.

"That is," explained the visitor, in order that there should be no mistake, "I like good little boys, and you're a good little boy, aren't you?"

"Well," returned the boy cautiously, "there are a lot worse than me on our street."

"I want that you should like me, too," prompted the visitor.

Again the boy was wise enough to hold his peace, but he looked as if he thought the job was a pretty big one. The expression was not lost on the visitor.

"Don't you like me now?" he asked.

The boy looked at the visitor and sighed. Then he looked at his father, and his expression was one of great doubt.

"Pop," he said at last, "does all that stuff that you told me about never telling a lie go now?"

Then the meeting was promptly adjourned amid considerable confusion.—Chicago Post.

HIRONS' VEGETONE.

It can be Procured at Your Druggists.

Use Hirons Double Treatment for Catarrh and Hay Fever.

Use Hirons New Asthma and Cough Cure for Asthma, Bronchitis, Pneumonia, Coughs, Colds, Throat and Lung Troubles.

Vegetone is purely vegetable in its composition. It is a reliable and permanent cure for diseases of the liver and kidneys, constipation, chills, malarial fever, loss of appetite, and a sure and effectual cure for headache and dyspepsia.

Vegetone acts by giving tone to the stomach, strengthening the liver and kidneys, and assists those most important organs in throwing off the impurities in the blood. Every person, in the spring of the year, needs a good, safe tonic for the replenishing of the system after a winter of inactivity, and Vegetone will produce the desired effects, being purely vegetable and a mild, pleasant laxative, thus throwing off the bile from the stomach, producing new vigor.

CATARRH.

One of the most troublesome and dangerous diseases known to mankind, can in the large majority of cases, be permanently cured. Many who were victims to that disease have been cured, and many more are being cured. Double treatment for Catarrh does its work effectually; clearing it out of the head, driving it out of the blood, where it exists, and ever will exist, unless the health destroying virus is eradicated from the system. Cure it. For it is not only a constant discomfort, but a perpetual menace to life. Use the New Asthma and Cough Cure as the blood purifier, and the Speedy Catarrh Cure for the nasal treatment for Catarrh, and soon those troublesome and distressing symptoms will disappear. The constant dripping of the mucous into the throat, and the pain in the head will cease. The hearing, sight, smell, and taste will be restored.

HAY FEVER.

Hay Fever, or Hay Asthma, as it is often called, is a combination of Bronchial and Nasal affections. The immediate cause and source of irritation being of external origin, attacking individuals during the months of May, June and August. The pollen of hay, dried grasses and rag weed comes in contact with the nasal and bronchial membranes, involving all the air passages, causing immediate irritation, frequently disabling persons afflicted therewith. The great discomfort and suffering, say nothing of the loss of life caused by this terrible disease, may be avoided by using Hirons' Double Treatment, which is a sure, safe and permanent cure. Commence using the medicine at once, and get your system in condition to resist the effect of these agencies upon the mucous membrane, thereby keeping the tissues in a healthy condition.

DEAR SIRS:—I had a severe case of La Grippe some time ago and suffered with a terrible cough until I tried a bottle of your New Asthma and Cough Cure. I used only one bottle of the medicine and it cured me entirely. I have had no cough since.

Believes It Saved Her Life.

The Hirons Medicine Co.

GENTLEMEN:—I wish to tell you how thankful we are for the great good your medicine has done for our daughter, Mrs John Metcalf. We sincerely believe that it saved her life. In November she had a bad case of LaGrippe, it left her with an awful cough. Our family physician informed her husband that she was threatened with consumption. We knew not what course to pursue, until one day when Mrs. Metcalf was reading your advertisement in the WEEKLY SENTINEL, she resolved to try a bottle of your new Asthma and Cough Cure. After using the remedy for a short time she was able to sit up in bed. In two weeks she was up and around. Her cough ceased, and now she is entirely cured, and advises all who have lung or throat trouble to give your medicine a trial.

Yours Truly,
SAMUEL DOLAN.

What the Resident Manager of the Chicago Newspaper Union Has to Say.

The Hirons Medicine Co., Fort Wayne, Ind.

GENTLEMEN:—Your Mr. A. R. Hirons persuaded me to give your Double Treatment for catarrh a trial, and after having used it about 30 days, I can honestly say that the results have been very satisfactory. I have been a sufferer from the disease since childhood, and was so bad at times that the membrane would bleed constantly. By the use of your medicine I have stopped the bleeding, my head is greatly relieved, and I have no more difficulty with my breathing.

Yours truly,
CHARLES D. TILLO.

A Hay-fever Victim Made Happy.

The Hirons Medicine Co., Fort Wayne, Ind.

GENTLEMEN:—I have been afflicted with Hay-Fever in its most malignant form for years. The first attack would appear in June. During August and September My sufferings were intense. Water would run from my eyes and nose, the paroxysm of sneezing were uncontrollable, and I had terrible burning pains in my head. I learned of your Double Treatment for Catarrh and Hay-Fever and procured it at once. After having used three bottles of the remedies I was entirely cured. I heartily endorse your valuable medicine, and advise all Hay-Fever sufferers to give it a trial. (SIGNED.)

At the Grand Canyon of the Yellowstone.

"Where the road turns to the left at Grand View, walk out over the talons of rock at the angle itself, sit down on the farthest chimney shaft, over rocks naturally white, but now blackened by weathering. If possible, go there in the morning or in the latter part of the afternoon. At noontime the light is too strong, and the details of the canyon are smothered, and the individuality of the walls killed. But with a soft morning or afternoon light every detail of one or the other of the walls leaps out from the general mass as if instinct with life. And what a wonderful sea it is that lies beneath and beyond us. A painted sea, not of water but of rock. And such painting! Try to distinguish the decided colors and their infinite variations. The most wonderful part of it is the rare blending, where one fades into another, and yet thou canst detect neither the beginning nor the ending."

The above is taken from "Wonderland 97," a new tourist book that tells all about Yellowstone Park.

He will join the Pennsylvania camping club of this city at the straits of Mackinac upon the adjournment of the Detroit meeting.

The installation of officers and other incidents of the Degree of Honor meeting held in the lodge hall last evening delighted the large number of members in attendance. The ceremonies belonged to lodge No. 2, but the social features were enjoyed by everybody, including visitors from lodges No. 22 and No. 26. Ice cream and cake added flavor to the occasion.

Columbia City council, Royal Arcanum, was organized last evening at Columbia City, Ind., with twenty-four charter members, all prominent business men of that city. The degree was conferred by Grand Secretary E. E. Shreeve, of Indianapolis, aided by Supreme Representative W. H. Tigar and Past Regents Geo. J. Wirth and J. B. Brown, of Fort Wayne. The future prospects for this council are good for a large gain in membership, as the members are very enthusiastic.

People who stayed away from yesterday's game because the Mansfields were the contenders missed one of the most interesting games of the season. Jack Welch was on first, Billy Holler at third and Lynch and Robinson back in their regular places. Ely was on the rubber and pitched fast ball for five innings, but had been worked too hard and let down the latter part of the game.

The Mansfields appeared like winners until the seventh, when a couple of errors by Strouthers and some hits gave Fort Wayne the lead and the game. There were about 100 people in attendance.

MANSFIELD NEWS IS MISTAKEN.

The Mansfield News man is mistaken in this item:

"Some of the Fort Wayne correspondents who sent out the same sought to get even no doubt for the two defeats of their team in this city by stating broadly that Strouthers filled in with amateurs. This is not the truth strictly speaking. At least two or three of the players on the team were professionals; Collars who played short was a member of the Fort Wayne team half the season. McDarby's name has also appeared on the Fort Wayne team's batting order. Campbell is one of Fort Wayne's regular catchers and was loaned to Strouthers for the occasion. Welch also placed on the Fort Wayne team for awhile but was dropped. Manager Strouthers had five assists at third base without error, something entirely new. Then the whole team of amateurs and misfits played with only four errors."

Collars did play three games with Fort Wayne at Youngstown under the name of Wilson, when the club was short a man, but neither McDarby nor Walter Welchever had on a Fort Wayne Inter State uniform, or played a game with the team.

SITUATION AT MANSFIELD.

The Mansfield News has the following: "A great deal of interest was manifested in local base ball affairs yesterday and today. Information is, of course, extremely scarce. It may be said that all the base ball material on the Mansfield team which was worth having has been saved.

"City Solicitor T. R. Robison, it is understood, has been consulted by some of the players who had refused to go to Fort Wayne with Manager Strouthers. It is also understood that he went to Fort Wayne Sunday night for the purpose of getting the strikers back on the team. Just before Pittsburg train No. 8 was due here, a long distance telephone message was received from Manager Strouthers and T. R. Robison, stating that the manager had agreed to take back Robinson and Lynch, but that he had no use for any of the others. Thereupon a couple of local base ball enthusiasts 'confiscated' a buggy which they found on the street, got Robinson and Lynch into it and drove the players to the depot just in time to catch it. Manager Strouthers had wired tickets for the two men, but none for the others. Robinson and Lynch took their uniforms and the local base ball people also got possession of all others except those of Mangan and Carroll.

"Things are now practically in good shape, and H. Burns is also in Fort Wayne. The former players of the team now with Manager Strouthers are: Katz, Latham, Lynch, Robinson, Ely, Hughes. Strouthers is playing third base. Mangan, Carroll and Werrick have already been suspended. Local base ball people have had a consultation and have decided to stand by Strouthers. The gentleman who has been at the head of base ball here for years stated this morning that Strouthers will not quit, and that the club will not quit in any event. The same man also said that he did not want to see the men who deserted Strouthers play on a Mansfield diamond again. Lynch and Robinson have evidently taken a different view of matters."

NOTES.

Joseph Shaver has resigned as captain of the True Blues and Robert Heffelfinger succeeds him. Morris Archibald will act as manager.

Manager Strouthers said to a SENTINEL reporter that he would have a strong club in Toledo. Jack Welch went away with the Mansfields.

Kansas City Star: "George Darby continues to win games for Fort Wayne. Campbell, of last year's Gold Bugs is catching for Wheeling in the Ohio-Indiana league."

Manager Hanlon says that he thinks New York will beat out Boston. This is a good deal like saying that he thinks both New York and Boston will beat out his Orioles, although Hanlon may not see it that way.

Herman Long is now playing the style of game that made him famous in 1890. Jennings, Corcoran and the rest must acknowledge the Boston man their equal and Boston may be pardoned for claiming Herman a shade faster than any short stop alive just now.

Mike Lynch, who played with Fort Wayne last season, has been given the management of the South Bend ball club and has offers out for Tom Mulhearn, Paul Kraft, Morris Justis and others. Funk [illegible] will be dropped. Mike wants the Fort Waynes to go to South Bend and play an exhibition game.

Burkett signed to play right field with Cleveland for $2,000 per year. Tebeau one day switched him to left and Burkett protested. As a result of his protest the latter carries in his inside pocket a contract with the Cleveland club which calls for a bonus of $100 a year for playing the sun field on the Cleveland grounds.
